

The Colombian drug war has been raging across the country for years and there seems to be hardly any way to stop it due to the chain reaction it will cause to the country but amidst of all these conflict, 2 new faction suddenly popped out of nowhere could this 2 faction help Colombia and the US against the drug cartels? Today the associated press will gather information about this in the HCC community in their First MUN held in Indonesia. The HCC delegates start off with the GLSC speech. Hugo Martinez started his speech by saying that the current state of Colombia is messy and that the transport of drugs to America has not been resolved yet, he hopes that the DEA will take it seriously. In this period, There were two other factions represented by the chairman in this period they're called the Los Pepes which strongly opposes Pablo Escobar, and the Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias or shortly known as the FARC which right now in the current state they are still having military conflict with the Colombian Government and the problem is that they're winning and could very well invade Colombia itself if the conflict still rages on. While the Los pepes won't do much harm to the Medellin cartel they still could pose a threat to the government because they could injure citizens to get to their goal of killing Pablo Escobar.

The FARC explained that they would back down if the Colombian Government agrees to their term of agreement. Their sets of agreements are that the Colombian Government must pay them at least 100 million dollars, immunity from the government and to be an official political party which means they could be elected as president. Its been one year and the Colombian government soldiers are being depleted time by time, while the Colombian government haven't decided on what to do. So the FARC decided to remind them again and gave them a time of one week to decide before they invade Colombia. One week passed and the decision was made the Colombian Government to pay the FARC only $60 million they are granted immunity from the Colombian government and are now an official political party which means that the head of FARC could be voted as the President of Colombia. In this period the Colombian government and the US government decided to work with the Los Pepes and the term of agreement between those two states are that all the gun and resources of Los Pepes will be supplied by the US and Colombian Government, no citizens are to be injured and harmed from the Los Pepes and that the Los pepes could hunt Pablo Escobar using any method they want. Los Pepes will also not be responsible for any infrastructure damage they cause so with that begins the collaboration of Los pepes and the Colombian government to try to eliminate the Medellin cartel and probably wipe other drug cartels from Colombia.

With problems from both factions solved, Colombia now focuses on their election, there are two candidates in the election they are the head of FARC and Luisi Galan. Another debate was held on who is better to be the president. Most of the delegate clarify that Luis is better of to be the president because on how he had great relations with the US and how having the US as close allies and lending their technology and manpower to the Colombian government could help them to eliminate drugs cartels from Colombia. While some delegates supported the FARC candidate because of how powerful the FARC could be and that they are one of the low class political parties there so they have the full support from the lower class of the Colombian citizens. And that marks the end of the first session of HCC in day 2 of MUN competition.